ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Westat wishes to acknowledge the support of the many people who played various important roles in database construction, the data entry, and documentation of the 1984 Winter Survey of Active Army Recruits. We especially appreciate all the assistance provided by the U.S. Army Recruiting Command. They are commended for their cooperation in problem resolution, steadfast support, and continued interest in this work.

We gratefully acknowledge that this survey effort could not have succeeded without the cooperation of personnel at the U.S. Army Reception Stations. They voluntarily administered the survey, working survey operations into their already hectic schedules for processing new recruits.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Requirement:

To obtain information on the characteristics, enlistment motivations, attitudes and knowledge of recruits at the point of initial entry into the Army.

Procedures:

The Winter 1984 New Recruit Survey (NRS) is the fifth in a series of recruit surveys administered by ARI, and is the second administration of the 1984 instrument. The survey instrument is an expanded version of the 1983 ARI survey incorporating new questions on preenlistment conditions.

Data were collected by ARI in group settings during initial recruit processing at all eight Army Reception Stations in October 1984 and February 1985. Reception Station personnel were responsible for scheduling and supervising survey administration, guided by instructions prepared by ARI. The NRS was self-administered and recruits were directed to indicate their responses on optical scanning forms.

Four forms of the NRS were administered to recruits. Forms A, B, and C were administered to Regular Army recruits, and Form D was given to National Guard and Army Reserve recruits. Regular Army recruits had an equal chance of receiving any one of the three forms.

Westat, Inc. was then contracted for database construction, documentation, and tabular analysis. The survey answer sheets were optically scanned and recorded exactly as marked. Survey data were then edited and coded. A supplementary user's manual, codebooks, and a report on the survey methodology, "lessons learned," and recommendations were produced.

Results:

A total of 4,814 Army recruits completed the 1984 Winter NRS. Of these, based upon Army personnel records, 4,482 had no prior military service and 91 had prior service experience (the status for the remaining 241 was not ascertained). The sampling plan employed imposes some restrictions on the generalizability of survey results to the population of Army accessions during FY 85. However, overall the survey effort was successful in obtaining updated information regarding new recruits.

Utilization:

ARI Surveys of Army Recruits provide information to Army personnel planners about the quantity and quality of recruits entering the Army. In particular, information regarding the characteristics, knowledge of enlistment options, and enlistment motivations of new recruits enables Army personnel planners to be cognizant of present enlistment trends. Awareness of these trends is vital, in turn, for preparing for future manpower requirements. The Winter 1984 New Recruit Survey will also help provide information on seasonality effects in Army accessions.

THE 1984 ARI SURVEY OF ARMY RECRUITS:
SUPPLEMENTARY USER'S MANUAL
FOR OCTOBER 84/FEBRUARY 85 ADMINISTRATION

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this Supplementary User's Manual is to provide background documentation for users of the data collected by the Winter 1984 Army Research Institute New Recruit Survey (NRS). This chapter briefly reviews the background of the 1984 NRS, describes other documents produced within the scope of this project, and discusses the organization of this User's Manual. The remaining two chapters cover survey administration procedures; and database construction and data quality indicators.

1984 NRS Reports

This Supplementary User's Manual is one in a series of 3 reports produced to document the approach, data, and results obtained from the 1984 Winter NRS. It is one of 12 reports documenting the combined 1984 Summer and Winter NRS. (Other reports have been produced documenting the 1982, 1983, and 1985 NRS.) As the name implies, the Supplementary User's Manual provides specific information about the October 84/February 85 administrations of the 1984 NRS that complements the more complete (1984) User's Manual. Readers interested in learning about the development and content of the 1984 NRS instrument and survey approach taken in the 1984 Summer administration are advised to consult The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: User's Manual (Research Note 86-46). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.

The User's Manuals focus on providing survey background for data users. Other reports in the 1984 NRS series are structured to present survey results, data documentation, and survey methodology. Codebooks have been produced to document, respectively, the 1984 Summer and Winter NRS survey data files. Each codebook pertains to a particular Army service component, either Regular Active Army (RA), or the U.S. Army Reserve (USAR) and Army National Guard (ARNG). These documents are essential tools for anyone planning to analyze NRS data; they document the physical locations and labels for all variables produced on the data files. The codebooks provide discussions on how to use and interpret the information which they document. Frequency distributions are also provided for each variable and the variable source is noted. These codebooks are entitled:

- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Codebook for Summer 84 Active Army Survey Respondents (Research Note 86-42). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.
- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Codebook for Summer 84 USAR & ARNG Survey Respondents (Research Note 86-43). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.
- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Codebook for October 84/February 85 Active Army Survey Respondents (Research Note 86-44). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.
- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Codebook for October 84/February 85 USAR & ARNG Survey Respondents (Research Note 86-45). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.

Preliminary results for the 1984 Summer survey are reported in separate documents containing crosstabulations of the NRS items by selected respondent demographics and service-related variables. These documents are:

- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Tabular Description of NPS (Active) Army Accessions, Volumes 1 and 2 (Research Products 86-09 and 86-10). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.
- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Tabular Description of NPS Army National Guard Accessions, (Research Product 86-11). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.
- The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Tabular Description of NPS Army Reserve Accessions, Volumes 1 and 2 (Research Products 86-12 and 86-13). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.

Volume 1 in the RA and USAR tabulations presents tables of NRS items crossed by selected respondent demographics (e.g., sex, year of high school graduation, race, etc.). Volume 2 presents crossing variables descriptive of recruits' enlistment conditions (e.g., age at DEP/accessioning, term of enlistment, recruiting brigade, etc.). Due to insufficient personnel data, the ARNG has a single volume of tabular descriptions comprised of NRS items crossed by a combination of three respondent demographics and two service-related characteristics. The actual crossing variables presented in the tabulation volumes vary somewhat across components. No comparable volumes are available for the October 84/February 85 survey administrations. The same crossing variables and recoded survey items produced for the 1984 Summer database were also constructed for the Winter. Thus, data analysts can easily produce tables comparable to the Summer 1984 tabulation volumes using 1984 Winter data.

An additional volume of potential interest is:

- The 1984 and 1985 ARI Survey of Army Recruits: Methodology and Recommendations for Future Administrations (Technical Report 706). Alexandria, VA: U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences.

This report overviews the project background and compares the survey methodologies used in the Summer and Winter administrations of the 1984 NRS with those used in the 1985 Summer administration of NRS. The document also reviews implications of low-cost vs. high-cost survey operations and provides recommendations for future NRS administrations.

Organization of User's Manual

The User's Manual is organized into three chapters and a series of appendixes. The first chapter in the User's Manual provides an introduction to the 1984 Winter NRS Supplementary User's Manual within the context of the other reports documenting the 1984 NRS, and includes a brief project overview. The second chapter discusses survey administration procedures and results. Discussions of both survey coverage and sample representativeness are included in this chapter.

The third chapter of the User's Manual provides an overview of survey database construction. As such, this chapter presents a summary of initial machine entry techniques, file construction protocol, the development of internal data consistency checks, data quality indicators, variable creation procedures, and so on.

Considerably more detail is provided on the selection of variables from Army personnel files (i.e., the Operations Reporting Master File, ORMF¹), and variable creation in the NRS codebooks.

The User's Manual concludes with a series of eight appendices that include the survey instruments (Appendixes A-D); survey administration instructions (Appendix E); listings of the Statistical Analysis System (SAS) survey file contents for Regular Army (Appendix F), and Reserve/National Guard components (Appendix G); and a crosswalk between ARI recruit surveys administered since Summer 1983 (Appendix H).

Project Overview

The ARI Surveys of Army Recruits, commonly known as the ARI New Recruit Surveys (NRS), are conducted on a regular basis to provide updated information on the characteristics, knowledge of enlistment options, and enlistment motivations of recruits at the point of their initial entry into service. Military personnel planners require such information on a regular basis to monitor current recruiting strategies and to forecast future enlistment trends.

The NRS were begun in the summer of 1982. Expanded versions of the 1982 surveys were administered in the Summer of 1983 and Winter of 1984. Further revisions and expansions were made to the 1984 instruments for administration in the Summer of 1984 and Fall/Winter of FY 85. In addition to the ability to track changes in recruits from year to year, this series of surveys offers the Army an opportunity to gather new information in each year of the survey.

The 1982 and 1983 surveys were directly commissioned by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. The 1984 and 1985 NRS were sponsored by the U.S. Army Recruiting Command and were undertaken with the continuing interest of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. While the sponsorship, specific questions, and interests may change from year to year, the charter for these surveys remains the same. The four main research requirements have been to determine: (1) the demographic composition of entering recruits; (2) how to target recruiting resources to attract high quality recruits; (3) new recruits' enlistment motivations and propensity for remaining in service; and (4) which recruiting and advertising practices are proving the most successful and why.

The 1984 Summer and Fall/Winter NRS are, respectively, the fourth and fifth in the series of recruit surveys conducted by ARI. Survey data were collected in group settings during initial recruit processing at all eight Army Reception Stations during June, July, and August of 1984, and again in October 1984 and February 1985. Reception Station personnel were responsible for scheduling and supervising survey administration, guided by instructions prepared by ARI. The NRS was self-administered and recruits were directed to indicate their responses on optical scanning forms.

Four forms of the NRS were administered to recruits. Forms A, B, and C were administered to Regular Army recruits, and Form D was given to National Guard and Army Reserve recruits. Regular Army recruits had an equal chance of receiving any one of the three forms.

A total of 15,309 Army recruits completed the 1984 NRS. 10,495 of these recruits were surveyed during the Summer administration, and 4,814 completed surveys during the Fall/Winter 1984 NRS. The surveys were distributed across components as follows:

Summer		Fall/Winter
RA	USAR/ARNG	RA	USAR/ARNG
6,184	4,311	3,524	1,290

The survey answer sheets were optically scanned and recorded exactly as marked. Survey data were then edited and coded. User's manuals, codebooks, tabulation volumes, and a report comparing the 1984 and 1985 survey methodologies, "lessons learned," and recommendations were produced.

The sampling plan employed imposes some restrictions on the generalizability of survey results to the population of FY 84 and FY 85 Army accessions. However, overall, the survey effort was successful in obtaining updated information regarding new recruits.

The 1984 ARI Survey of Army Recruits provides information to Army personnel planners about the quantity and quality of recruits entering the Army. In particular, information regarding the characteristics, knowledge of enlistment options, and enlistment motivations of new recruits enables Army personnel planners to be cognizant of present enlistment trends. Awareness of these trends is vital, in turn, for preparing for future manpower requirements.

ADMINISTRATIVE IMPLEMENTATION

Survey Instrumentation

Identical versions of the 1984 instruments were administered during Summer 1984 and the 1984 Winter NRS. The 1984 instruments can be viewed as refinements and extensions of previous NRS instruments. The 1984 NRS User's Manual, which this report supplements, contains a complete chapter discussing the development and content of the 1984 survey instruments. Readers are referred to that volume for further details concerning the 1984 NRS instruments.

Administrative Procedures

The Winter 1984 NRS was administered in group settings during initial recruit processing at all eight Army Reception Stations during the months of October 1984 and February 1985. Reception Station personnel were responsible for scheduling and supervising survey administration. It was expected that all recruits being processed for initial entry training during the administration period would be surveyed by the Reception Stations. All stations were given two one-week periods for survey administration (the weeks of October 29, 1984 and February 18, 1985).

Depending on local operating procedures, either the Personnel Affairs or Testing Branch at each Reception Station supervised survey administration, guided by instructions prepared by the ARI (these instructions are provided in Appendix E). The NRS was self-administered and respondents were directed to mark their answers on separate optical scanning forms. Instructions on the use of optical scanning sheets were printed in the front section of each survey (see Appendixes A through D) and were read to the recruits before the survey began.

Four distinct forms of the NRS were distributed to recruits. Forms A, B, and C were administered to Regular Army recruits while Form D was given to National Guard and Army Reserve recruits. The three Regular Army forms were interleaved immediately before surveying recruits to insure that each Regular Army recruit had an equal chance of receiving any one of Forms A, B, and C.

Administrative Coverage

The Winter 1984 NRS population was composed of accessions into the Regular Army, Army Reserve, and Army National Guard during the first and second quarters of FY 85. A total of 4,814 recruits completed optical-scan answer sheets during the Winter survey effort. Table 1 presents counts of completed surveys for the eight Reception Stations.

Table 1
1984 Winter NRS Survey Participation
by Reception Station

Reception Station	Cases	% of Sample
Fort Benning	620	12.9
Fort Bliss	206	4.3
Fort Dix	246	5.1
Fort Jackson	1,194	24.8
Fort Knox	753	15.6
Fort Leonard Wood	513	10.7
Fort McClellan	685	14.2
Fort Sill	493	10.2
Unidentified	104	2.2
Totals	4,814	100.0

Survey completion rates varied greatly across Reception Stations. Nearly one-quarter (24.8%) of all surveys completed in the Winter administration of the NRS came from Fort Jackson. Fort Knox and Fort McClellan contributed the next largest proportions of completed surveys (15.6% and 14.2%, respectively). These three stations together contributed over half (54.6%) of all surveys administered. The Reception Stations at Fort Dix and Fort Bliss contributed the smallest proportions of completed surveys, i.e., less than 10% combined.

The relative percentages of surveys contributed by each Reception Station, as presented in Table 1, should not be considered indicative of the distribution of processing load across Reception Stations during the first and second quarters of FY 85. This caveat is given because the rate of survey participation was uneven among the eight Reception Stations. Therefore, the processing burden of each Reception Station is not accurately reflected in Table 1.

Table 2 presents the actual NRS survey participation (in numbers of completed surveys) for each Reception Station by week during October 1984 and February 1985.

*Participation is measured as number of surveys completed.

Table 2 reveals that administration schedules differed only slightly across Reception Stations. All of the Reception Stations, except Fort Dix, administered surveys during two calendar weeks (Sunday through Saturday) in the Winter administration.² Fort Dix participated only in the second administration week, beginning February 18, 1985.

Although the processing load of some Reception Stations is greater than others, it is difficult to determine from looking at Table 2, the influence of this variation on the survey completion rates during each administration week. For example, Fort Jackson appears to have processed a greater number of recruits during the first administration week than the second week (696 vs. 491 completed surveys). However, this finding may be an artifact of administrative operations (e.g., incomplete survey administration schedule) or a reflection of variation in the processing load. On the other hand, looking across Reception Stations, it should be safe to assume that Fort Jackson overall processes more recruits than Fort Bliss (1,194 vs. 206 total completed surveys).

The distribution of surveys across Army components varies with regard to Reception Station participation as well. Survey counts by self-reported Army component do not parallel the findings for total survey counts. If categorized by Regular Army, National Guard, and Army Reserve components, the relative contribution of various Reception Stations changes slightly. For Regular Army and Army Reserve components, Fort Jackson remains the primary source of surveyed recruits (contributing 24.2% and 31.3%, respectively). For National Guard recruits, the relative ranking of Reception Stations changes somewhat. The Reception Station at Fort Knox which surveyed over 30% of all National Guard recruits in the Winter 1984 NRS, is the primary source of National Guard surveys. Fort Jackson contributed 15.9% of the National Guard respondents. At the lower end of the contribution scale, Fort Bliss and Fort Dix contributed the lowest percentages of Regular Army surveys at 4.4% and 4.8%, respectively, and both stations contributed the same percentage (4.1%) of National Guard surveys. The smallest percentage of Army Reserve surveys (1.1%) was contributed by Fort Sill.

Again, it was expected that the processing of recruits in each of the three Army components would not be evenly distributed across all eight Reception Stations. However, we cannot tell from survey information alone whether the rankings presented in Table 3 reflect the processing load of stations or whether the stations' survey administration schedules determined the rankings. The implications of unequal participation rates are discussed in the next section on survey representativeness.

Survey Representativeness

Using unweighted survey data, the number of surveys collected during the 1984 Winter NRS cannot alone justify the generalization of NRS findings to all FY 85 accessions, nor to accessions occurring during the first two quarters in FY 85. However, provided that appropriate sample weighting is employed, these data can prove useful for summarizing and analyzing attitudes and motives that influence enlistment decisionmaking. In addition, analysts need to be aware of possible sources of bias, such as seasonal variation and varying response rates.

Seasonal Variation. The seasonal variation that regularly occurs in the quality and quantity of recruits entering the Army components assure that these Winter data will not strictly reproduce a profile of FY 85 Army accessions. For example, Reception Stations process relatively greater numbers of recent high school graduates, and Army Reserve and National Guard recruits during the summer months than at any other time of the year. Thus, one would expect these components to be underrepresented in the Winter NRS.

Response Rates. Obtaining differential survey response rates across Reception Stations has implications for the representation of various military occupational specialty (MOS) groups, as well as gender, in the survey results. Variation in training schedules among MOS impacts upon the availability of recruits within particular MOS groups for survey participation.

Reception Stations differ with regard to the MOS training they offer. Thus, if a particular station has a low survey participation rate, the MOS offered at that station may be underrepresented in the survey results. The eight Reception Stations are equally divided between OSUT (one station unit training) and non-OSUT stations. OSUT stations process only male recruits in the larger combat arms MOS, whereas the non-OSUT stations process both male and female recruits in a variety of smaller MOS's. The Reception Stations are distinguished below:

OSUT	Non-OSUT
Fort Benning	Fort Dix
Fort Knox	Fort Leonard Wood
Fort Sill	Fort Jackson
Fort Bliss	Fort McClellan

Fort Bliss and Fort Dix had relatively lower survey completion rates than the other stations. (Fort Dix conducted only one administration of the 1984 Winter NRS.) MOSs processed through these stations will be underrepresented in the 1984 Winter NRS. As a non-OSUT station, Fort Dix's low response rate may also affect the representation of female recruits in the NRS results.

Training schedules vary across the Reception Stations based upon the size of the MOS offered (i.e., large vs. small) and the type of station (i.e., OSUT vs. non-OSUT). Larger MOS (e.g., infantry) at OSUT stations begin training nearly every week. Thus, survey administration could be conducted at almost any time and achieve a representative sample across MOS of recruits processed at the Reception Station. However, the non-OSUT stations set aside very specific weeks for training the smaller MOS groups (e.g., military intelligence), making it somewhat more difficult to obtain a good mix of recruits in the survey.

The Winter 1984 NRS did not develop a sampling plan that ensured random selection of sample members. Thus, it is important to be cognizant of the various biases which may impact the generalizability of survey findings. Variations in survey completion rates across Reception Stations and in MOS training schedules are two possible biases to be considered.

Comparison of Survey Respondents to Population of Army Accessions. The fact that survey participation was not equal across the eight Reception Stations is the major reason why these data may not accurately generalize to the total Army accessions. In addition, surveys were administered only in October 1984 and February 1985. Survey administration would have had to have been conducted in additional months during the year in order for the population of FY 85 accessions to be fully represented in the survey results.³ Given these constraints, it is nevertheless instructive to view the degree to which the characteristics of ³These constraints on generalization are imposed as a result of sampling theory considerations. The detailing of theoretical constraints as they relate to the NRS are not discussed in this document.

the unweighted survey data reproduce the characteristics of the FY 85 accessions cohort. Tables 4, 5, and 6 provide three limited comparisons of the distributions of survey⁴ and population (defined as all accessions in FY 85) characteristics. These tables compare distributions on component, AFQT categories, and gender. The population data in these tables were obtained by ARI from official records maintained by the Department of Defense.⁵

Component. Table 4 shows that a higher percentage of RA recruits were surveyed (73.9%) than acceded during FY 85 (63.5%). In contrast, smaller percentages of USAR (10.7%) and ARNG (15.4%) recruits were surveyed than acceded during FY 85 (15.5% and 21.0%, respectively). This discrepancy occurs as a result of the survey administration dates. Because the two Reserve components are processed largely during the summer months so that education and employment schedules are minimally disrupted, it is not surprising that survey distributions for the USAR and ARNG components would be underrepresented in the Winter NRS.

⁵RA population data for FY 84 was obtained from the Enlisted Accession Branch, Director of Military Personnel Management, Office of Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Department of Army; data for USAR/ARNG was obtained from the Defense Manpower Data Center, Defense Logistics Agency.

Tables 5 and 6 display a more similar correspondence between survey and population distributions than observed above.

AFQT. The comparison of AFQT category distributions across NRS respondent and Army accessions, depicted in Table 5, reveals only small differences across AFQT categories.⁶ The largest difference between the two groups occurred for category 4A (3.4%). Aside from this difference in the distributions, the overall distributions across AFQT categories of surveyed recruits and FY 85 Army accessions look very similar.

* A total of 147 RA and 94 USAR/ARNG surveys were obtained for which no match could be made on the ORMF and thus no data on AFQT are available for these individuals. In addition, the ORMF variable for AFQT was missing for 1 USAR/ARNG respondent. AFQT's lower than level 4A (i.e., 4B, 4C, and 5) were reported on the ORMF for 10 USAR/ARNG recruits; since an AFQT of 4A or better is currently required for NPS applicants to enlist in the Army, these respondents were treated as missing in this table.

AFQT was unknown for 2 RA, 244 USAR, and 566 ARNG respondents. In addition, AFQT could not be obtained for 6 ARNG recruits who were not tested.

⁶A respondent's AFQT category is based on his/her Armed Forces Qualification Test (AFQT) score on the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery (ASVAB). The AFQT score scale has traditionally been divided into categories for purposes of reporting recruit trainability.

Gender. The comparison of gender distributions between NRS respondents and FY 85 Army accessions reveals no differences. It appears that the gender distribution for the Winter NRS mirrors that of the FY 85 accessions. This similarity is a particularly positive finding, in light of the uneven survey completion rates across the Reception Stations.

Comparison of Gender Distributions:
Total FY 85 Army Accessions (NPS Only),

Female	12.6%	12.6%

* A total of 147 RA and 94 USAR/ARNG surveys were obtained for which no match could be made on the ORMF and thus these individuals are not included in this table.

Gender was unknown for 1 ARNG recruit.

While the NRS is rightly considered an excellent source of information regarding, for example, interrelationships between enlistment motivations and market segments, unweighted NRS data should not be used to estimate population accessions motivated by one factor or another. However, NRS can be used to provide relative findings for subsamples of Winter 84 Army recruits.

DATABASE CONSTRUCTION

This final chapter discusses the procedures used to construct the two (Regular Army and Army Reserve/National Guard) survey data files for the Winter 1984 NRS. The major types of data processing performed include: (1) conducting range and logic checks to identify range errors and data inconsistencies, (2) recoding erroneous data to special missing value codes, (3) creating logic variables to "flag" inconsistent data, (4) constructing data quality indicators to assess respondents' ability to follow the questionnaire, and (5) developing methods for treating survey items which did not follow conventional data formats (e.g., multiple response items). Each of these processing procedures are discussed, as well as the procedures employed to actually construct the NRS databases.

The two 1984 Winter NRS databases were produced using both the Statistical Analysis System (SAS) and Operating System (OS) formats.⁷ Both files contain survey responses merged with selected Army personnel data obtained from the ORMF. Additional data files were produced for each Army component containing the complete ORMF records for matching survey respondents. (Lists of the variables contained on the SAS and OS data files for the RA and USAR/ARNG are contained in Appendixes F and G).

Preliminary Data Processing

As noted in the previous chapter, survey responses were recorded by recruits on answer sheets. These sheets were optically scanned following administration of the Winter 1984 NRS. During the scanning operation, all responses were recorded exactly as marked, irrespective of the values encountered (e.g., answers outside the range of legitimate codes provided on the survey were recorded exactly as indicated on the answer sheet). Subsequent editing transformed missing values, multiple response errors, and out-of-range items to consistent and interpretable codes.

Data Quality Indicators

Missing and/or incorrect information can arise from either accidental transmission errors or intentional respondent choice. Transmission errors include circumstances in which recruits inadvertently miscoded optical scanning forms (due to the misreading of items or directions, or even distractions occurring during survey administration), and machine processing errors (faulty recording of responses either during optical scanning or subsequent processing). Intentional misinformation arises whenever a respondent deliberately refuses to answer a question or knowingly provides an incorrect response.

⁷SAS is a statistical software package. Data files were designed to be read using this language. The OS data file was designed to make the survey data accessible on any IBM-compatible computer system.

Because it is impossible, ex post facto, to identify all missing and incorrect information contained in the survey files (much less their source), prudent measures were taken during each stage of the survey process to insure accurate data transmission and processing. During survey administration the confidentiality of responses was emphasized to recruits. In addition, instructions for survey completion were included in the survey booklet and read to respondents before survey administration began.

Subsequent processing of the survey responses was performed in accordance with ARI specifications to retain the data just as provided by the respondent. This processing enabled very explicit labeling of erroneous information to indicate when answers were: outside the range specified on the questionnaire, missing, or inappropriately supplied (i.e., providing multiple responses when only one was requested). In addition, respondents' logical consistency was checked in two ways. Within-question consistency was assessed by examining responses to each item in "serial list questions." For example, Q15 on Form A asked respondents to mark all applicable response categories to the question, "Do you remember seeing, hearing, or receiving (before you enlisted) any advertising or promotional material from all the military services together?" Response categories included answers such as "on television," "in magazines," and "on the radio." The final category read "None of the above." Consistency evaluations were performed to identify logical inconsistencies in which respondents checked the final category plus any other response category.

Logic checks were also conducted to assess the similarity of responses across related survey items. Inconsistent responses were recoded on separate "logic" variables.

Data Editing. Two levels of data editing were performed on the raw survey data to produce the SAS and OS analysis files. These are discussed below:

- Level 1 Edits. The first level of edits consisted of variable-by-variable range and logic checks. Examples of range and logic errors include cases in which a respondent reported working more than 52 weeks during the previous year (range check), or in which a respondent contradicted himself by making an affirmative response to a question in addition to a "none of the above" response (within-question logic check). Special edits were conducted to search for multiple responses (or no response when one was called for) to questions for which a single response was appropriate.

- Level 2 Edits. The second level of edits evaluated consistency across survey items. These checks were used to identify circumstances in which a respondent provided inconsistent answers to two or more related survey questions. For example, a respondent who said that educational benefits were the most important reason for enlisting but failed to note such benefits in a similarly worded "mark all that apply" formatted question would be identified as inconsistent.

Cases with variables failing Level 1 edit checks had reported values reassigned to ".", "A", or "B" (nonresponse, multiple response error, or out-of-range response, respectively) depending on the reason for edit failure.

When responses to a group of related survey items were found to be inconsistent (i.e., Level 2 edit failures), the value "1" was assigned to a corresponding logic variable. These logic variables provide the data analyst with a convenient index of data consistency (a value of "0" is assigned to consistent responses). Level 1 and 2 logic variable names are identified by the prefixes L1_ and L2_. Logic variable creation is documented in the NRS codebooks.

Edit checks should be used by analysts to judge overall data quality (see the next section) and to judge the quality of individual survey items. Analysts planning future surveys should also use the edit checks to judge the reliability of different question formats.

Level 1 Edits. Tables 7 through 9 present the results of Level 1 editing.⁸ These summaries are presented by survey form and component and reflect differences in the number and complexity of items in different forms of the survey. Differences between USAR and ARNG recruits (all of whom completed Form D) may reflect differences in how well Form D fit recruits from these two components.

Table 7 presents the frequency of total survey nonresponse by form (Form D results are expressed separately for Army Reserve and National Guard recruits). The total number of missing values on a completed survey constitutes a rough index of item coverage. Generally, the fewer the number of missing items, the more fully a questionnaire was filled out.

* A total of 94 Form D surveys were obtained from respondents for whom no matching ORMF record could be obtained to determine component. The distribution of missing values for these cases overall resembles that of the USAR/ARNG components. However "no match" surveys were not as complete as USAR/ARNG surveys (28.7% vs. 35.8% contained no missing values).

Table 7 reveals that the four survey forms differ with regard to how thoroughly they were completed by respondents. The greatest differences exist between the RA survey forms (Forms A, B, and C) and the Army Reserve/National Guard instrument (Form D) at the lower end of the scale (i.e., smaller numbers of missing values, none, 1, etc.). It appears that both Army Reserve and National Guard recruits completed their surveys more completely than Regular Army respondents (38.2% and 34.1%, respectively, contained no missing values). At the higher end of the missing value distribution ("10 or more" missing values), Form B surveys had the highest proportion of surveys (31.8%) with "10 or more" missing values.

In general, it appears that response coverage of survey items was adequate. No less than roughly 70% of surveys, across all form types, contained nine or fewer missing values.

Tables 8 and 9 present frequencies of out-of-range values and multiple response errors, respectively, for each form of the NRS. The out-of-range values provide a measure of respondent error and legibility in completing the NRS. The frequency of multiple response errors can be used to point out items in which respondents did not follow instructions to mark only one response. The lack of attention to directions may indicate that respondents did not find that the response alternatives provided were adequate. Overall, Tables 8 and 9 provide an assessment of respondents' difficulty in completing the NRS.

It becomes apparent in Table 8 that all forms of the NRS were fairly legible and contained relatively few out-of-range values. Over one-half of each of the NRS forms contained no out-of-range values. USAR respondents had an especially high percentage of surveys (60%) with no out-of-range values. Forms A and B contained the largest percentage of out-of-range values, with 11.7% and 19.8%, respectively, having 10 or more out-of-range values.

* A total of 94 Form D surveys were obtained from respondents for whom no matching ORMF record could be obtained to determine component. The distribution of multiple response errors for these cases overall resembles that of the USAR/ARNG components. However, "no match" surveys contained slightly fewer multiple response errors than USAR/ARNG surveys (i.e., 53.2% vs. 51.7% contained no multiple response errors).

Table 9 shows that three-quarters or more of the surveys contained at most one multiple response error. These findings support the hypothesis that, overall, respondents found the response alternatives provided in NRS items to be adequate for categorizing their responses.

Forms A and B had the most respondent error and missing data (Tables 7-9). The biggest source of these problems were in rating job factors, questions 81-160 (T281-T360), which involved complex instructions for marking the answer sheet.

Level 2 Edits. Counts of Level 2 edit failures (i.e., failed consistency checks) are a useful measure of how well respondents completed their surveys, in general. These checks can assess the amount of (both intentional and accidental) misreporting by respondents, thus providing an indication of respondents' attentiveness to survey directions and skip patterns. They can reveal something about the respondents' motivation and the effectiveness of the survey design, just to mention a few of their uses.

Table 10 provides an overview of the consistency (or lack thereof) among survey responses to related questions across each form of the NRS. At first glance, it is evident that the responses of Regular Army recruits were, overall, more consistent than those of Army Reserve and National Guard respondents (i.e., nearly one-fourth of each of Forms A, B, and C had no failed logics vs. 20.8% and 16.4%, respectively, of USAR and ARNG responses on Form D). RA respondents completing Form B had the highest proportion (37.0%) of surveys with no logic failures.

* A total of 94 Form D surveys were obtained from respondents for whom no matching ORMF record could be obtained to determine component. The distribution of failed logic checks for these cases overall resembles that of the USAR/ARNG components. However, "no match" surveys failed a few more logic checks than other USAR/ARNG surveys (i.e., 11.7% vs. 18.2% contained no failed logic checks).

Over 80% of all survey forms contained 3 or fewer logic failures. Compared to the other data quality indicators reported in Tables 7-9, there were fewer occurrences of failed logics across survey forms than other types of errors (e.g., out-of-range values, multiple response errors, and missing values). This indicates that the NRS data are consistent and, in turn, may indicate that respondents were motivated to accurately fill out survey items.

Summary of Edit Checks. Table 11 contains distributions for each NRS form of the sum of all response errors. That is, this table presents a "summary" of the quality of the 1984 Winter NRS data. In the column "Number of Values," "None" indicates that there was no occurrence of any of the response errors presented in Tables 9-10 (i.e., out-of-range values, missing values, multiple response errors, and failed logics). A value of "10 or more" means that there were 10 or more occurrences of one or more response errors.

* A total of 94 Form D surveys were obtained from respondents for whom no matching ORMF record could be obtained to determine component. The distribution of total response errors for these cases overall resembles that of the USAR/ARNG components at the lower end of the scale (i.e., 9 or fewer errors). However, a larger proportion of "no match" surveys contained 10 or more response errors than other USAR/ARNG surveys (51.1% vs. 37.6%).

The distributions of this summary measure for each survey form are fairly comparable at the lower end of the distribution (i.e., 9 or fewer values). A look at surveys with "10 or more" response errors reveals more clearly the differences in quality of data across forms. RA respondents completing Form C and USAR respondents (Form D) had the lowest proportions of surveys with "10 or more" response errors (31.5% and 36.3%, respectively). Form B surveys had the highest proportion (46.3%) of "10 or more" errors.

Overall, no less than 50% of surveys completed by any component contained less than 10 response errors. Given the fact that response errors were calculated across nearly 400 variables, the overall incidence of error can be considered relatively low. The results in Tables 7-11 reveal that the data collected in the Winter 1984 NRS administration are of fairly good quality for use by analysts. The data quality indicators (i.e., missing values, out-of-range values, multiple response errors, and logic failures) show that these data do not contain a great extent of errors which would be prohibitive to conducting analyses.

Serial List Items

The 1984 NRS instrument contained several serial list question sets which required special treatment because of their unconventional format. This section discusses how these items were handled in preparing the Winter 1984 database.

In question sets which instructed respondents to "mark all (response categories) that apply", each response item was coded as a dichotomous variable. For example, Q23 (T118) in Forms A-C (Regular Army) was separated into eight dichotomous variables, T118A-T118H:

- (T118) 23. Which of these items did you use or appreciate having? (MARK ALL THAT APPLY)
- (T118A) A. I never received any of this material in response to a toll-free call or card.
- (T118B) B. Letter telling me location of Army recruiting station.
- (T118C) C. A gift like tube socks or wrist bands.
- (T118E) E. Booklet about Army service.
- (T118F) F. Booklet about Army college fund.

(T118G) G. A bumper sticker.

(T118H) H. Army bookcovers.

The value "1" was assigned if the item was checked, a "0" if it was not. If the respondent circled only "B" and "E" in response to Q23, the value "1" would be assigned to variables T118B and T118E. The remaining six variables, T118A, T118C-T118D, and T118F-T118H, would be coded "0".

Some recruits marked inconsistent responses on this type of question. For example, it is inconsistent to mark both "A" and "E" in the question above. In this example, T118E would be assigned the value "1" and T118A would be assigned the value "A" for multiple response error.

Database Construction

Two databases were constructed for the Winter 1984 NRS. One file contains the survey responses of Regular Army recruits (Forms A, B, and C) and the other contains the survey responses of Army Reserve and National Guard recruits (Form D). Each data file has a separate record for each respondent containing: (1) survey responses; (2) Army personnel data (selected MEPRS and REQUEST variables extracted from the ORMF); and (3) created variables, e.g., the logic variables that identify inconsistencies in a recruit's responses. Both data files are available in SAS and OS format. See Appendixes F and G, respectively, for lists of variables in the RA and USAR/ARNG data files.

A separate database was constructed which contains a complete ORMF record for each respondent matched during the merge of survey data with selected ORMF data (described above). This database was constructed in OS format only and is available for merging additional data into the survey data files.

You are now going to start answering questions in the main part of the survey. Answers for these questions are marked in the numbered rows on the Answer Sheet. Be sure to mark the letter best fitting your opinion in the correctly numbered row.

The first question is:

1. Based on what you know now, how satisfied do you think you will be with Army life? Please use the scale below to answer this question. For example, people who expect to be Very Satisfied with Army life would mark "A". People who think they will be Very Dissatisfied with the Army would mark "G". Other people may have opinions somewhere between "A" and "G".

 - B. Somewhat important
 - C. Fairly important
 - D. Very important
 - E. Most important; I would not take a job that did not have this

- A. Very unsatisfied

 - C. Neutral
 - D. Somewhat satisfied
 - E. Very satisfied

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ADMINISTERING
THE 1984/1985 ARI SURVEY OF NEW RECRUITS

APPENDIX E

Instructions for Administering the 1984/1985 ARI Survey of New Recruits

I. Before Administration

A. Please read the survey booklets carefully before beginning the first administration in order to make sure that you understand everything that is being asked of the new soldiers who will actually be taking the survey. By reading the surveys, you can prepare yourself for any questions or difficulties that the survey respondents may have. You can discuss any problems with Timothy Elig or Becky Pliske, AV284-5124/9045.

B. The survey will be most efficiently administered in a classroom-like setting. Respondents should be seated and have adequate table space to comfortably respond to survey items.

C. The current date (month, day, and year) and your Site Number (listed on Page 2 of each survey) should be written on a blackboard or chart paper in the survey administration area where it can be easily seen by all respondents (preferably in the front of the survey administration area).

For example, the blackboard or chart paper at Fort Bliss would look like this on the third of August:

August 3, 1984

Fort Bliss ID is 4

D. Have ready a large supply of number 2 pencils. All survey respondents must use a number 2 pencil in completing the survey.

E. When surveyed, soldiers should have with them one of their processing forms listing their social security number. (Unlike last year they do not need to know their MOS.)

F. Before soldiers are seated, distribute pencils, one answer sheet, and one survey booklet to each seat. Distribute surveys based on expected numbers:

- All members of the Regular Army will answer a survey printed on white paper.
- All members of Army Reserves and Army National Guard will answer a survey printed on green paper.

II. Administration

Direct recruits to appropriate seats — with white (Regular) or green (USAR/ARNG) booklets. Then announce to soldiers:

Please turn to the front of the booklet. Make sure you have the correct survey. The title of the survey indicates if it is for Active Army Recruits or for Army Reserves and Army National Guard Recruits. Active Army recruits should have a white booklet; USAR and National Guard Recruits should have a green booklet.

When everyone is ready, read aloud the first 6 paragraphs from the front page of the survey booklet. These paragraphs are reprinted below.

The Army Research Institute (ARI) is conducting a survey of people entering the Army. You have been selected to participate in this important survey. Your answers will have no effect on you as an individual. Please read and follow all directions carefully.

Public Law 93-573, called the Privacy Act of 1974, requires that you be informed of the purpose and uses to be made of the information that is collected.

The Department of the Army may collect the information requested in the ARI Survey of Army Recruits under the authority of 10 United States Code 169.

Providing information in this questionnaire is voluntary. Failure to respond to any particular question will not result in any penalty.

The information collected in the survey will be used to evaluate and improve military personnel and recruiting policies.

The information will be used for research and analysis purposes only.

2. Read these instructions aloud. Be prepared to answer any questions.

Read each question carefully.

Put all of your answers on the ARI GENERAL PURPOSE ANSWER SHEET. DO NOT PUT ANY MARKS IN THIS QUESTION BOOKLET.

Use only a number 2 pencil for completing this survey.

DO NOT use ink or ballpoint pens.

Make heavy black marks that fill the response circle completely.

Erase completely any answer you wish to change.

Make no stray marks on the answer sheet.

Please look at the Examples of right and wrong markings on side 1 (upper left) of the ANSWER SHEET.

Then read the following instructions, which are not printed in the survey books.

Please turn your ANSWER SHEET to Side 1. Start marking your answers on this sheet only when I give you the directions to do so.

Locate the DATE Block in the upper left hand corner of the answer sheet. (Note the columns of circled numbers under the blank spaces for the Day and Year.) Complete the date by darkening the appropriate circle for the current month. Then, write in the day and year. Both of these should be two digit numbers. (If it is the first through the ninth of the month, put a zero before the date.) Use the last two digits of the current year, "84". Then, darken the matching circle in the columns below each year and date box. (Refer the recruits to the date on the board).

Locate the Social Security Number Block (just to the right of the date Block). Print your social security number in the boxes and mark the matching circles in the columns below the digits of your social security number.

Please have the recruits copy their social security number from one of their processing forms.

Locate the Special Codes Block (just to the right of the Social Security Number Block). In Spaces A through E write the 5 digit zip code of the house in which you spent your teenage years. This could be your parents' house, another relative's home, or a guardian's house. If you moved during your teenage years, spaces A through E should be the zipcode where you lived for the longest time while 16 to 18 years old. Make sure that you darken the appropriately numbered circles in the columns below your zipcode digits.

The Form Block has two rows of responses. The numbered row of circles (the top row) is for Reception Station identification. Darken the appropriate circle for this Reception Station which is:

Tell the recruits the appropriate number. (See page 2 of questionnaire).

Use the lettered row of circles to indicate which Form of the survey you are completing. The instruction below the list of Forts tells you which letter to darken in the lower row of lettered circles in the Form Block. For example if your survey is "Form C" then you would mark "C" in the Form block.

NOTE: DO EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO MAKE SURE THE FORM IS CORRECTLY MARKED. IF THE FORM IDENTIFICATION IS MISSING OR MISMARKED, EVERYTHING MARKED ON THE ANSWER SHEET WILL BE USELESS OR MISINTERPRETED.

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS:

Do not skip an item that does not seem to apply. If an item does not seem to apply, there will always be a response like "does not apply" or "none of the above" for you to mark.

If you do skip an item, be very careful not to lose your place on the answer sheet. Be sure your answers are all marked in the correctly numbered row of circles.

You have ___ minutes to complete the survey. When you have completed the survey, please bring the survey booklet, the answer sheets, and the pencil to me. Please continue with the instructions on page 3.

Stay with respondents throughout the administration in order to answer any questions they may have. Please go to the recruit's seat to answer questions once you have finished the general instructions — the end of page 2 in the questionnaires. It saves everyone's time if all the recruits are not disturbed by every question.

Thank each soldier as they complete the survey and collect their survey materials.

III. Prepare for the next administration group.

Leaf through each of the survey booklets to ensure that there are no markings on them, and save the undamaged booklets. Undamaged booklets are reusable. Form D is to be kept separate from the other forms. Forms A, B, and C should be kept in one stack and interleaved (A, B, C, A, B, C, A, B, C, etc.).

Thank you for your help. If you have any questions about any aspect of the survey or the administration procedure, please call Timothy Elig or Becky Pliske, AV 284-5124/9045.
